The play ‘Fish Don’t Cry’ is a mono-performance based on the play by Elena Petrovskaya, dedicated to the tragic events in Mariupol and their reflection in the human soul. The play was written after the author’s communication with an actress of Mariupol theatre, who survived the Russian bombardment of the city with a three-month-old child in her arms. The main idea of the work is to preserve humanity and compassion even in the most difficult circumstances.

The play became a common point of intersection of experience, feelings and responsibility for the team from different countries. It reflects on how to preserve humanity when the world around us is changing irreversibly, and on the fact that the feeling of loss is the same for everyone.
